“We can’t teach children to behave better by making them feel worse. When children feel better they behave better.”

- Pam Leo

Behaviour is communication

As educational professionals we need to recognise behaviour as a form of communication. Each action and reaction from our students conveys a deeper message about their internal states, needs, and emotions. By understanding and interpreting these behavioural communications, we can create a more supportive and responsive educational environment. Let's listen not only to what our students say but also to what their behaviours tell us, as this is the key to fostering a nurturing and effective learning atmosphere.

Vision & Ethos

I am committed to working collaboratively with school staff to create a culture where strong, trust-based relationships are the foundation for managing behaviour. By prioritising empathy and connection, we can transform the school experience for students, allowing them to flourish both emotionally and academically. My approach is tailored to empower educators to see beyond the behaviour, to the child in need of support, ensuring that every student has the opportunity to reach their full potential.

- Targeted training support
- Ongoing support

Why choose Turning Point

Selecting me as your behaviour consultant means choosing a professional with a proven track record in school improvement, in both academic and behaviour outcomes. With a Master's degree spanning three years, I have a deep understanding of the impact that childhood experiences, trauma, attachment, and brain development have on students. My commitment is unwavering when it comes to enhancing the experiences of both children and staff within educational settings. I am driven by a passion to create positive change and foster an environment where everyone can thrive.

About me: Angharad Rees

BA (Hons) Prim. Ed. QTS, MA SEN, NPQH, MSc Play Ther.

With over 20 years of primary teaching experience, including 8 years as a head teacher, I have seen firsthand the difficulties many children face, coupled with the lack of provision available to support their emotional and mental health needs, and so I decided to embark on a new career and retrain in children's mental health.

I believe that my experience in education linked with my knowledge of how relationships and social interactions impact brain development, position me uniquely to offer innovative and impactful educational services that cater to the holistic development of individuals, fostering not only academic success but also emotional and social well-being.
